Temecula Creek Inn's idyllic setting makes it a haven for rest and relaxation for couples, families, avid golfers and executives seeking a tranquil destination away from the big city.

Nestled against a backdrop of rolling hills and the majestic San Jacinto Mountains, Temecula Creek Inn is a hidden wonder in the heart of Southern California's wine country. This 350-acre resort reflects the peaceful elegance of its natural surroundings, welcoming guests with beautifully-manicured landscaping including thousands of fragrant roses which line the winding resort entrance and an abundance of towering sycamore, stone pine, eucalyptus, ash and California live oak trees.

Temecula Creek Inn also has an abundance of wild life. Coyote, bobcats and raccoons can be spotted on the grounds. Birdwatchers revel in the discovery of red tail hawks, blue jays and orioles along miles of well-marked trails, which wrap around the resort and lead hikers and joggers on morning or late-afternoon jaunts.

THE COURSE

Secluded in the natural beauty of Southern California's wine country, the 27-hole championship golf course of Temecula Creek Inn is renowned for offering golfers a variety of challenges on three distinctive nines. Dick Rossen designed Oaks and Creek courses using a more traditional layout with tree-lined beauty and playability. The Stonehouse course was added in 1990 and designed by the renowned architect Ted Robinson. This course offers dramatic elevation changes and demands precise, accurate shots. These three courses have been rated Four Star by Golf Digest Places to Play.

THE DINING (Breakfast, Lunch & Dinner)

Being in the heart of Southern California's wine country, The Temecula Creek Inn offers you an enjoyable dining experience with all the flare of the region's naturally bounty. The Temet Grill, which over looks the course and a stunning waterfall that flows into a pond, is led by the creative culinary talents of Executive Chef Salvatore Guiliano. Chef Guiliano tempts you with a blend of classic wine country cuisine with a Mediterranean flair. He uses seasonal produce and products from the region and features the region's premium wines as the perfect accompaniment to the Grill's fine cuisine.
